A self-paced curriculum for learning the basic techniques government agencies, citizen action groups, corporations and research institutions use to solve pressing environmental problems.

'Environmental Problem-Solving presents short-excerpts from carefully selected readings, expert commentaries on those readings, assignments, and the best MIT student responses to the assignments, exam questions with excellent student response. The book presents four main models of environmental policy-making; competing theories of environmental ethics; tools for environmental assessment and environmental decision-making; and techniques for public engagement and group decision-making. The book covers the material presented in the semester-long course required of all students enrolled in MIT's Environmental Policy and Planning Specialization. It includes the actual assignments the MIT students are expected to complete. The final exam is accompanied by the best student answers.
